BLOODY JULY 4TH WEEKEND

More than 50 shot, at least 7 dead across
Chicago since Thursday

Chicago Tribune

More than 50 people were shot over Chicago's holiday weekend, with at least seven fatalities and five police-involved shootings as of Sunday night since Thursday afternoon, according to authorities.

Five of the people were shot by police over 36 hours, and at least two of them were killed, including a 16-year-old boy who was shot Saturday night as he hid under a car with a gun in an alley in Gresham, according to authorities. Friends and family at the scene of the shooting at 87th and Morgan streets identified the boy as Warren Robinson.

The boy began getting out from under the car when officers told him to drop the gun, authorities said. He did not and officers shot him, authorities said.

Photographs taken at the scene shortly after the shooting show family members crying and embracing, including his mother, Georgina Utendahl, who said the boy was three days away from his 17th birthday.

"The police killed him," she said. "Why they killed him, I don't know."

A .380-caliber semiautomatic handgun was recovered at the scene, authorities said.

In a second police-involved fatality, a 14-year-old boy who had a revolver was killed Friday night in the 4700 block of West Berenice Avenue, according to authorities. The Cook County medical examiner's office identified the victim as Pedro Rios, of the 7400 block of North Ashland Avenue.

Among other fatal shootings over the weekend, a 19-year-old man was killed as he drove in the Uptown neighborhood early Sunday morning, authorities said. The driver, identified by police as Kezon A. Lamb, 19, of Alsip, was with another man and a woman when shots were fired at their Malibu at Montrose Avenue and Malden Street, police said.

The Malibu sped off west on Montrose and stopped at Paulina Street—about two blocks from Mayor Emanuel's home—and flagged down a police officer, according to authorities. Lamb was taken to Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center, where he was pronounced dead.

Late Saturday, a 25-year-old man was killed while riding a bicycle in the 10400 block of South Normal Avenue in the Fernwood neighborhood on the Far South Side.

Also Saturday night, Shaquille Ross, 18, was shot in the chest in the 6500 block of South Seeley Avenue in West Englewood, according to authorities. He was later pronounced dead at Advocate Christ Medical Center in Oak Lawn.

Deandre Brown, 23, of the 9000 block of South Mackinaw Avenue, was shot in the 8700 block of South Houston Avenue about 10:20 a.m. Saturday, officials said. He was pronounced dead at Northwestern Memorial Hospital just over an hour later, according to the Cook County medical examiner's office.

On Sunday, a man in his 40s was shot in the chest and a woman in her 20s was shot in the foot and leg near 132nd Street and Prairie Avenue around 3:30 p.m., according to police and fire officials. Police said the shootings stemmed from a domestic dispute.

The man was taken in serious condition to Advocate Christ Medical Center, according to Fire Department spokesman Larry Langford.

"As that was being worked on, another person [the woman in her 20s] was shot at 132nd Street and Prairie Avenue," Langford said. The woman also was taken to Christ Medical Center, he said.

Around the same time, firefighters were called to the Little Calumet River at 134th Street and South Vernon Avenue. But arriving crews were told by police that a person had been taken into custody, Langford said.

The man was chased by officers because he had a weapon, according to police. It was not known if he was a suspect in the shootings on Prairie or another shooting an hour earlier in the 13100 block of South Forrestville Avenue.

In that shooting, a woman was grazed on the top of her head as she walked up the steps of her porch in the Golden Gate neighborhood, police said.

"She was not the intended target," the lieutenant said, adding she was an "unfortunate victim."

Always a first time for buying condoms

Niki Fritz

redeye@tribune.com
@fritzfrack

I just bought condoms for the first time in my life—at age 28.

I realize this is a pretty ridiculous fact. I'm a grown-ass woman; I have a car, I clip coupons, I even buy the double-ply toilet paper. By this point in my quasi-adult life, I should be buying my own safe-sex accessories. But until now I just relied on the free bin at the doctor's office or, more pathetically, I banked on my partner providing the condom.

Recently I've found myself in a lovely little situation and needed to fish through the old condom grab bag pretty often (sometimes a few times a night—self high-five!). Soon we were down to those unnecessarily ribbed numbers or the even more awkward black tuxedo ones. My partner offered to go buy more condoms, but I decided it was my time to face the strangely intimidating family-planning aisle at CVS.

Of course when I got there, I scanned the weekly specials and snagged two bottles of Barefoot Cab for $10 (such a steal!). I then casually strolled the aisles, seeing if anything else sparked my fancy, until I reached the brightly-colored boxes filled with latex joy.

Any tinge of excitement about purchasing my first condoms quickly dissolved to pure intimidation when I saw the sheer volume of options and ridiculous prices. Am I the only sad sack who didn't know condoms, on average, are about $1 a pop?

I quickly passed over anything textured, because to be honest that stuff is a pointless gimmick. I vetoed the spermicide ones because those aren't any more effective than normal condoms, plus they taste gross and can do some damage if you have sensitive lady parts. I glossed over the overpriced foreign condoms because, you know, America. That left me with a lovely purple box of lubricated Durex. Now all I had to decide is, do I go for the normal 30 pack or spring for the value option?

In the end, the giant box of condoms was just a little too Costco-y for my tastes. Plus I didn't want to look like I was bragging. I headed to the checkout, my wine, a card for my mum, some mouthwash and a box-o-condoms in hand, pretty satisfied with myself but also realizing that I'd been living in ignorance for years. I had no idea the pricey decisions my partners had faced over the years.

At the same time, I realized my partners probably never realized the price and overwhelming choice that goes into selecting a birth-control pill. We share body fluids, intimate moments and our lives with our sexual partners, but not the details on how we keep each other safe and baby/STI free.

To truly walk a mile in our partners' sexy shoes, we need to start sharing the cost and choice of each others' safe-sex paraphernalia. This is a hetero-centric missive, but women need to take a trip to the condom aisle and men need to go pick up their lady's prescription. When we start sharing the safety portion of our safe sex, we all can feel fully invested in the fun times made possible by the glory of latex and synthetic hormones.

ROAD TO FUTURE

No easy fixes in reshaping North Lake Shore Drive

Chicago Tribune

North Lake Shore Drive is a mess for many of the quarter-million drivers, bus passengers, pedestrians and bicyclists who use it each day, according to new research from city and state transportation officials who are planning an overhaul of the aging boulevard.

The drive, the heavily used trails and parks that parallel the eight-lane roadway and the Inner Drive that provides access to neighborhood streets have fallen victim to their popularity. The increase in traffic volumes has been compounded over the years by the absence of comprehensive renovations, a new Illinois Department of Transportation study has concluded.

The study, which was released ahead of a public meeting Tuesday on the roadway's future, paints an unsettling picture:

» An average of three crashes a day occur along North Lake Shore Drive.

» When congestion is not bogging down traffic, up to 95 percent of motorists violate the 40 mph speed limit, often by 30 mph or more, on a boulevard that has no emergency shoulders or even guardrails or barrier walls in some locations and never was intended for highway conditions.

» Structurally deficient bridges; dilapidated pedestrian tunnels, many of which do not meet requirements under the Americans with Disabilities Act; and roadway flooding caused by high waves add to the headaches.

The overall cost is unclear at this early stage, officials say. Rebuilding the roadway as is, which is considered unlikely, would cost several hundred million dollars, and the timeline for construction has been delayed, with the first spade of dirt set to be overturned no earlier than 2019.

The Metropolitan Planning Council and other civic groups say one of their top priorities is to reverse the trend of the drive, which is used as a major commuting route, becoming a superhighway.

Away from motorized traffic, increasing numbers of people are avoiding the lakefront trails during the busiest times of the day and weekends because they fear for their safety due to the chaotic mix of bicyclists, pedestrians and joggers—all moving at different speeds and often coming and going unpredictably in different directions, the study noted.

"There absolutely are a lot of problems. CTA buses are all stuck in the same traffic as the cars. The Oak Street curve needs to be straightened out. Some of the intersections on the drive are too closely spaced and the bridges and pedestrian tunnels are 80 years old," said John Baczek, project and environmental studies chief at IDOT in the Chicago area.

The complexities of North Lake Shore Drive—as well as opportunities for the public

HAVE IDEAS?

The Illinois and Chicago departments of transportation will host a public meeting from 1 to 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Gold Coast Ballroom of the Drake Hotel, 140 E. Walton Place.

to offer potential solutions—will be the focus of a meeting Tuesday in downtown Chicago. It's one step in a process aimed at reaching consensus over the next three years on a modernization plan that preserves the historic lakeshore corridor while serving the needs of today and future generations, officials said.

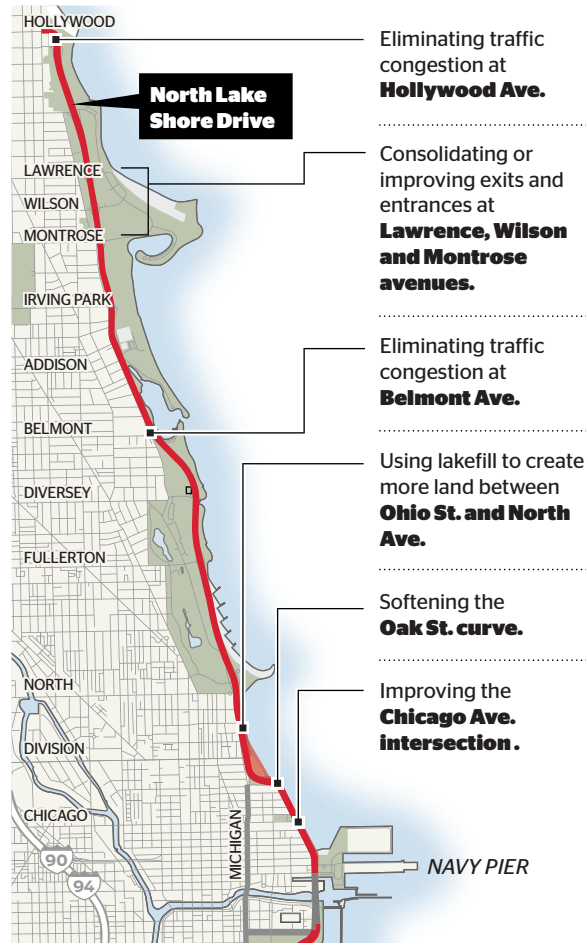

"We want to get the brainstorming going. There may be ideas that we haven't thought of yet," Baczek said.

When informed that improvements are coming, Lakeview resident Kristin Goebel said they are long overdue, adding that sections of the lakefront trail are in "horrible shape."

Redesigning North Lake Shore Drive

Transportation officials in Chicago will hold a meeting on the planned redesign of North Lake Shore Drive and the lakefront trail on Tuesday. Officials hope to make the drive safer for both drivers and pedestrians. Five stretches of the drive have extensive accident histories that include 51 percent of all crashes from 2007-2011. Forty percent of those surveyed use the trail to commute by bicycle.

HOW THE TRAIL IS USED

How those surveyed at an early and public NLSLD redesign planning meeting used the Lake Front Trail:

TRIBUNE

The 29-year-old office manager said she has cut back on bicycling along the lakeshore because "you put your life in jeopardy." She limits her bike workouts to very early in the morning, sometimes midday, and her one hard-and-fast rule is "never on summer weekends."

A survey summarized in the IDOT study echoed Goebel's sentiments, noting that, "Many stated they avoid the lakefront trail during the busiest times because it is unsafe."

More than 160,000 cars, 970 CTA buses carrying 69,000 riders and as many as 31,000 trail users each day are drawn to the roughly 7-mile lakefront stretch between Grand and Hollywood accounts, according to data contained in the draft study on the drive.

The study cites an opportunity to improve accessibility to Lincoln Park and between the park and Lake Michigan. About 20 million people a year visit the park, according to IDOT estimates.

Those soaring numbers could not have been predicted early last century, when city planners set in motion a boulevard through Lincoln Park—"where grass and shrubs and trees assert themselves."

By 2040, bus ridership on the drive is projected to increase 23 percent, according to the Chicago Metropolitan Agency for Planning. Car counts are expected to rise minimally, from about 155,000 vehicles per day to 161,000 vehicles in the most heavily traveled sections, because the drive is already beyond its capacity to efficiently move traffic, officials said.

North Lake Shore Drive is 60 to 80 years old in different sections and it's no longer cost-effective to keep resurfacing the road because the sub-base is crumbling, officials said.

South Lake Shore Drive, from 23rd to 67th streets through Jackson and Burnham parks, was rebuilt in 2001-2005. A 2-mile extension from 79th to 92nd streets through the site of U.S. Steel Corp.'s old South Works plant opened last year.

Quinn signs birth-control measure

Chicago Tribune

Illinois voters on Nov. 4 will have the chance to say whether they support a state law requiring health insurance plan providers to offer prescription birth control coverage to employees.

Joined at the Thompson Center by representatives of Planned Parenthood and the Illinois National Organization for Women, Gov. Quinn signed a law Sunday that will put the question on the ballot.

Quinn

The signing comes days after the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that some private companies can refuse to pay for some contraceptives for its female employees based on the religious beliefs of their owners.

Quinn on Sunday called that Supreme Court decision "disappointing and distressing."

"It's important that we here in the heartland of our country ... have an opportunity at the ballot box for people to send a message that bosses shouldn't be able to determine the personal health care decisions of their employees who are women," Quinn said.

The referendum legislation passed the Illinois House and Senate this spring with little Republican support. Though because it's an advisory referendum, it will have no power of law, rather it's intended to influence legislators.

In an election year, the signing gave Quinn a chance to speak to female voters, who will be key in winning reelection against Republican challenger Bruce Rauner.

When contacted Sunday by the Tribune, Rauner campaign spokesman Mike Schrimpf noted that birth control coverage was already state law and that Rauner supports the existing law.

Quinn on Saturday signed three bills meant to improve recreational boating safety during an event at 31st Street Harbor with legislators and representatives from the boating community.

"It's a very serious matter in our state," Quinn said at a press conference that was timed to raise awareness during the Fourth of July weekend, when boating numbers are higher on the lake. "Safety out on the water is just as important as it is on land."

The legislation was sponsored by State Sen. Julie Morrison, a Deerfield Democrat, whose 10-year-old nephew died when a boater under the influence of alcohol and cocaine struck and killed him on Petite Lake near Lake Villa on July 28, 2012.

U.S. closer to allowing commercial drones

The U.S. air safety regulator is drafting rules to permit small drones to be used for commercial purposes, a step toward allowing remote-control planes and helicopters to be deployed for everything from TV news coverage to monitoring crops.

Media companies, energy companies, farmers and other groups have been pressuring the Federal Aviation Administration to lift its ban on flying drones, known as unmanned aerial systems, or UAS, for commercial use. Late last month, the agency's watchdog said the FAA was likely to miss the Sept. 30, 2015 deadline that Congress set for integrating drones into the national airspace.

The FAA told Reuters that rules for small drones are "being drafted and will be issued for comment later this year."

Industry sources said the FAA has a working draft of the regulations and is circulating it within the agency. The FAA declined to comment on whether it has formally drafted the rules but said it "is on track to issue a proposed rule for small UAS this year."

Finalizing the regulations, however, could take several years, in part because they involve numerous FAA offices and other agencies, such as the Pentagon and Department of Homeland Security, said Ted Ellett, a former FAA chief counsel who is now an attorney at Hogan Lovells in Washington, D.C.

"Until the final rule is issued, which is going to be years from now, the exemption process is the only game in town," Ellett said.

Twelve companies have petitioned the FAA to be exempt from the commercial drones ban, including eight film companies that want to use drones to shoot movie scenes. They say specially trained pilots would fly small drones only on closed sets, making them at least as safe as manned helicopters.

All the applications have been filed since late May, and the FAA is seeking public comment on them.

6 suspects arrested over teen's death

Israel has arrested six Jewish suspects in the abduction and killing of a Palestinian teenager, a security source said Sunday. The burning-alive of 16-year-old Mohammed Abu Khudair, and the earlier killings of three kidnapped Israeli teenagers, have driven relations between Palestinians and Israelis to their lowest point since peace talks broke down in April.

Man arrested in Bourbon St. shootout

The 20-year-old Louisiana man who allegedly triggered a gunfight that left one woman dead and eight others injured June 29 on Bourbon Street was arrested in Mississippi on Friday, police said. Trung T. Le, 20, of Belle Chase was captured Friday by U.S. marshals and New Orleans police, according to a news release.

Ordinary users outnumber targets in NSA data: report

The Washington Post said Saturday a study of a large collection of communications intercepted by the U.S. National Security Agency showed that ordinary Internet users, including Americans, far outnumbered legally targeted foreigners caught in the surveillance.

BOOM!

Gotta love it when Cubs blow up their roster

Matt Lindner

» @mattlindner

So what are Cubs fans going to talk about now that they can't speculate when Jeff Samardzija is going to be dealt?

While you were drinking beer this weekend and either blowing up stuff or watching other people blow up stuff, Theo Epstein and Jed Hoyer put on a Fourth of July show of their own that's going to be far more memorable in the long run than any fireworks display you saw.

Samardzija, along with fellow starting pitcher Jason Hammel, were dealt to the talent-rich Oakland Athletics for Addison Russell, one of the top prospects in the game, and a handful of others.

What that means for this season is Cubs tickets likely are going to be a lot easier to come by, especially with a rotation that reads like Jake Arrieta, Travis Wood and pray for something good.

This trade wasn't about the short term, though. This season was always going to be a complete wash, and only the most delusional Cubs fans thought Samardzija and Hammel would finish the season in blue pinstripes.

The sad reality is, if you're a Cubs fan, the trade deadline is your World Series, the time of year providing the most possible excitement and reason to celebrate.

This front office has earned the fan base's trust. And if history is any indication, this deal could signal better days ahead at Clark and Addison.

One only has to go back to last season, when the Cubs dealt starters Scott Feldman and Matt Garza before the trade deadline. In return, Baltimore and Texas gave the Cubs their new ace (Arrieta), three of their top relievers (Justin Grimm, Neil Ramirez and Pedro Strop), their starting third baseman (Mike Olt) and one of their top pitching prospects (C.J. Edwards).

All the aforementioned players are going to be Cubs for years to come, and all have—by all accounts—bright futures. That's a hell of a haul in exchange for a couple of pitchers who never factored into the Cubs' long-term plans.

Hope is a spring that runs eternal in Wrigleyville, promising better days ahead than those suffered in years gone by. It's how the Cubs have made money for years. And for the first time in a long time, there's reason to believe those hazy dreams won't be haunted by the ghosts of front offices past.

MATT LINDNER IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

OAKLAND LIKEY
In news that will make Cubs fans cry and/or want to root for Oakland, Jeff Samardzija was outstanding in his A's debut Sunday. He pitched seven innings, giving up one run on four hits and striking out five in Oakland's 4-2 win over Toronto.

Jeff Samardzija
USA TODAY SPORTS

See them in Minnesota

Three Chicago players were selected as reserves in baseball's All-Star Game, set for July 15 in Minneapolis:

CHRIS SALE/
TRIBUNE

Jose Abreu, White Sox 1B

Why he's going: He can hit the ball very, very far. His 27 home runs lead the majors and he has 69 RBIs.

Alexei Ramirez, White Sox SS

Why he's going: As great as starter Derek Jeter is, he's 40 and could collapse at any time. Enter Ramirez (.286 batting average, 41 RBIs).

Starlin Castro, Cubs SS

Why he's going: The cynic would say it's because Jeff Samardzija would have represented the Cubs but just got traded (he was named to the team as a Cub, however). Castro is having a good year though (.287, 51 RBIs).

THEM TOO?

White Sox pitcher Chris Sale and Cubs first baseman Anthony Rizzo might be All-Stars, too. Both are part of the Final Vote for their respective leagues. Fans can vote through 3 p.m. Thursday at mlb.com.

HAIR YEAH!

At least Jeff Samardzija's mullet is in a better place now.

1	What happens to Jeff Samardzija's mullet when he arrives in Oakland?	It dreadlocks itself and starts listening to Jamsil, Too Short or E-40.	Much like his fastball, it won't move.	The mullet is heading south to Hollywood and auditioning for a part in HBO's "Eastbound and Down."	It learns how to surf and turns into beachy waves.	His mullet actually gets a signing bonus.
2	When will the Cubs' new prospects start to help the team?	Next season! Just kidding, those kids are screwed.	Whoever wrote this question should be slapped.	Hello, McFly! According to "Back to the Future 2," that would be 2015.	When Theo pushes the "GO" button on the Win-O-Matic 5000.	Well, we did have this conversation in 1919. Soon. Trust me, OK? Sooooooon.
3	Start your own Chicago baseball trade rumor.	I heard you can get the entire Cubs team and the field they play on for Jose Abreu's batting gloves.	Cubs trade the rest of their rotation to Sears for a new washer/dryer combo.	The Cubs will trade Clark the Cub and Ronnie Woo Woo to Oakland for Billy Beane as played by Brad Pitt.	Ronnie Woo Woo to the South Side in exchange for absolutely nothing. Please. Take him.	I have stock I want you to buy at a high price. It may not turn a profit, but give me five years. Wait, seven. Ummm, eight?
4	What can you tell us about Nikola Mirotic?	He loves it when you can him "Mirotic the Psychotic." Trust me!	He's from a country with a socialist republic government. No punch line. That's true.	Isn't that the guy who makes the throat lozenges? Niiiiiikooooaaaaa!	I can tell you he'd better be as good as advertised or GarPax will get roasted.	He's the power forward from a Spanish league we've ALWAYS wanted. His nickname is "Melo" right?
5	Who deserves to be a Chicago baseball All-Star?	All of us, for suffering through it.	Johnny Domanico. Low ERA. Huge bat. Loves Miller Lite tall-boys after a win. Look him up.	RedEye's own Soxman, to represent Chicago baseball fans who still have hope.	The fans, for continuing to show up.	Ricky Renteria. Just give it to the guy, will ya!

Beware Brazil's anger

If notorious biter Luis Suarez is the top villain in this year's World Cup, Juan Camilo Zuniga is right behind him. Brazilian soccer officials want FIFA to punish the Colombian player who broke Neymar's vertebra in a quarterfinal Friday. The striker will miss the rest of the tournament. Brazil's soccer federation presented FIFA with evidence and demanded action.

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Cancer June 22-July 22
A mashup of planets in your sign is increasing your sexual fire-power. You'll find it easy to please your honey while continuing to pursue other flirtations. Or if you're focused on being committed to someone, you'll keep your partner well entertained.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22
A romance has an on-again, off-again feeling right now, but don't be too worried. The moon is encouraging you to take some time to examine what's working and what isn't so good in your relationship so you can fix it.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22
You're super intense right now as Saturn shows you that you have a lot of things to take care of. Just don't push your honey to the side if you're extra busy with work or other obligations. Find a way to make room in your schedule for life as well as love.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23
You could be regretting certain moves you've made in the bedroom lately. Venus is showing you that sometimes you can be a little too casual about sharing your sexual energy. Try to be a bit choosier with your partners, and you'll experience better results.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21
An emotional sun is inspiring you to make a confession. Maybe you'll finally open up to your ex about what was really going on when you broke up. Or perhaps you'll break down to a trusted friend or parent about something that has been bothering you.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21
There could be a communication breakdown thanks to disruptions from Mercury. Don't freak out if you miss a date because you had the wrong time. Sometimes texts and emails go missing.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19
You're second-guessing how you've been handling things, and a moon square could create more doubt. Don't be so hard on yourself. Try to just focus on sharing good times with your honey and do some healing.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18
You could encounter someone who isn't your usual type, yet you'll be madly attracted to him or to her. Maybe this person holds opposite political or religious views. The moon says keep your mind open.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20
You're feeling more comfortable in your own skin, and Mercury will continue to help you with this. You'll find it easier to talk to attractive strangers, network with business associates and just generally get along with people.

Aries March 21-April 19
You won't take no for an answer as the moon makes you lustier than ever. Express your passionate Fire sign energy and let that cutie know how much you appreciate his or her charms. Just be yourself, and you could end up getting lucky.

Taurus April 20-May 20
Don't take things at face value, because your judgment could be off. A moon opposition has you screaming at the ghosts of past relationships instead of focusing fully on the present. Try not to project old pain at your new honey—that isn't fair.

Gemini May 21-June 21
Friendly Venus continues to keep those flirty vibes flowing. It's more important to date and get to know people right now than settle down into a long-term situation. If you're smart, you'll keep your options open.

FREE AND OPEN TO THE PUBLIC

I. E. Block Community Lecture, part of the 2014 SIAM Annual Meeting:

Search and Discovery in Human Networks

The web grows larger, more social, and more real-time every day, allowing ordinary people to express themselves more publicly and permanently than ever before. The words and pictures they leave on their blogs and social networks provide the raw material to explore aspects of humanity through the eyes of millions of people.

In this free, public lecture, Sep Kamvar of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) will discuss how this technology shift, and the cultural shift that accompanies it, offers great opportunities for the search and discovery of human nature!

This presentation can be enjoyed by anyone with a high school math background.

Wednesday, July 9, 2014, 6:15-7:15 pm at The Palmer House

Eldredge proud of Illinois roots

ABOUT LAST NIGHT

Luis Gomez

✉ @TribLuis

The small town of Paris, Ill., is the birthplace of Carl Switzer, the late actor who played the iconic Alfalfa in the "Little Rascals" series, and Brett Eldredge, the country music singer whose singles "Don't Ya" and "Beat of the Music" reached No. 1 on the country airplay chart. Only one of the two, however, has his name plastered on signs welcoming visitors to Paris, about 180 miles south of Chicago and home to about 9,000 residents.

The signs read "Home of Nashville Recording Artist Brett Eldredge."

"Alfalfa was definitely the most famous person from Paris, but I never saw any ['Home of Alfalfa'] signs," Eldredge said Thursday over the phone from his tour bus. "It's cool that Alfalfa came from [Paris]. The show was before my time, but it's a classic show."

The 28-year-old Eldredge believes Paris will be well-represented not only on stage for his performance but also in the crowd. He guesses about a hundred people with Paris roots will attend, almost half of whom will make the 3½-hour drive from Paris to Chicago.

"I have a lot of friends who will be there for life," Eldredge said. "I know a lot of people who love the town enough that they never have a reason to leave. There are cornfields and cow pastures and a lake right in the middle. It never changes. And that's what I love about it. I love going back. It gives me a sense of normalcy in the crazy world I live in, where I'm traveling so much."

Before he released his first and only studio album ("Bring You Back" in August) and opened for the likes of Taylor Swift and Brad Paisley, Eldredge was a student at Elmhurst College in Elmhurst.

"I grew up 3½ hours outside of Chicago, but people would call me a 'hick' or 'country boy,'" Eldredge said. "Maybe it's because I talked with more of a country accent."

Eldredge's time at Elmhurst College didn't last long. He had his sights set on a career in country music and decided to transfer to Middle Tennessee State University to be closer to Nashville. He admits to being naive when he arrived, but he believes it was ultimately the key to his success. He didn't really think about the fact that the odds were against him and that there were tens of thousands of other people in town pursuing the same dream. Eldredge knocked on songwriters' doors asking if he could write a song with them and performed at songwriter nights, eventually landing a publishing deal and then a record deal with Atlantic Records in 2009.

He released his first song, "Raymond," in 2010 but said it wasn't the huge hit he had expected it to be.

"It did OK. It wasn't like leaps and bounds," Eldredge said. "I told myself, 'I've got to earn this. I've got to keep fighting and have the same fight in me that I had when I first moved to town.' I had something to prove and went in the studio and started writing. I got into fitness and style and learned the whole craft. That was when I wrote everything on the album. I put out 'Don't Ya,' and it took off. And now I have my second No. 1. Everything is really just growing now."

Paris honored Eldredge in December with a ceremony in his old high school's gym. The mayor of Paris presented him with a key to the city and announced on behalf of Gov. Quinn that Dec. 22 would be known as Brett Eldredge day in Paris and Illinois.

"I grew up in Paris and knew everyone there, so to go back to the gymnasium where I used to sing and play basketball and have the high school's cheerleaders and band bring me out ..." Eldredge said. "It was a special day."

Another disc in the wall

Pink Floyd will release its first album in 20 years this October, Rolling Stone reports. Polly Samson, the wife of singer-guitarist David Gilmour, tweeted the news Saturday, saying the disc will be titled "The Endless River."

HOT DATE

AUG. 1

That's when Lily Allen will join Miley Cyrus on her Bangerz tour, vulture.com reports. The "Sheezus" singer will perform seven shows with Ms. Cyrus, during which time she'll probably learn a thing or two about wardrobe malfunctions—and maybe tattoos. Over the weekend, Miley showed off her latest, honoring her dearly departed dog Floyd, on Instagram.

Chris Colfer

Still 'Glee'ful

Remember, kids: You can't believe everything you read on Twitter. "Glee" star Chris Colfer's account was hacked Thursday, and the following lie was tweeted out to the masses: "Due to personal issues, I have been let go from the cast of Glee. Explanations will come shortly," thr.com reports. All is well, Curt will not be killed off and we can all go skipping merrily into the Fox show's final season.

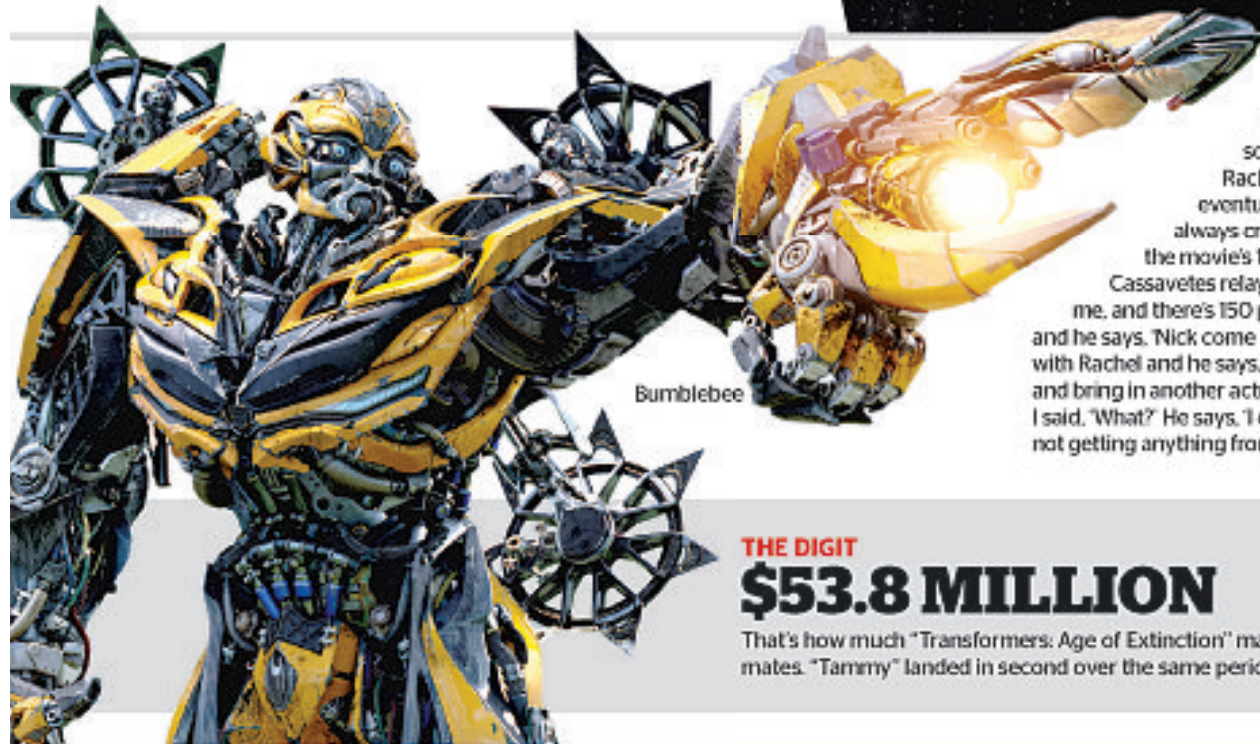

THE QUOTE
I liked her, because we're the same height, and we were looking into each other's eyes. I liked that, because I don't get to meet that many people who are my height. So it felt like we had a connection."

—"Game of Thrones" star Maise Williams, to Vulture, on meeting Queen Elizabeth on the show's set. If only we could be so cool about meeting a monarch.

Sob story

Where has Katherine Heigl gone? Well, we found her on the cover of Marie Claire U.K., talking about how she was BURNED by the world of romantic comedies. "I was so stoked to be doing them," she said. "But maybe I hit it a little too hard. I couldn't say no. There's nothing wrong with them, but maybe I overloaded my audience. I should have done a superhero movie or a psychological thriller." Now that would have been entertaining.

Bumblebee

Love-hate relationship

Though "The Notebook" involved some pretty steamy floor action, and Rachel McAdams and Ryan Gosling eventually dated in real life, the two weren't always crazy about each other. In honor of the movie's 10th anniversary, director Nick Cassavetes relayed this story to VH1: "Ryan came to me, and there's 150 people standing in this big scene, and he says, 'Nick come here.' And he's doing a scene with Rachel and he says, 'Would you take her out of here and bring in another actress to read off camera with me?' I said, 'What?' He says, 'I can't. I can't do it with her. I'm just not getting anything from this.'" And then they dated.

THE DIGIT

$53.8 MILLION

That's how much "Transformers: Age of Extinction" made over the five-day holiday weekend, according to studio estimates. "Tammy" landed in second over the same period with $32.9 million, the Los Angeles Times reports.
